More Attention Must Be Paid By Hog Raisers To Feeding And Marketing In Best Condition

During the past few years Canadian hog producers have been able to command a premium for their hogs. This has been made possible by the quality of their hogs and pork products. Hog raisers have been able to bring in acknowledgment to the full extent of their production. It is not surprising that the demand for fine quality hogs is so great. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. price differentials between the grades. If the hog continues further, the price will have to be taken to correct it. The necessity is not to change in price, but to change in the quality of the hogs. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser.

In the pork trade there are two requirements of consumptive demand. The first is that the meat should be of a high quality. The second is that the meat should be of a high quality. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. It is in this way that a definite demand as to the quality of meat and the amount of fat. The bulk of the trade wants lean, but not too lean. Another section requires somewhat fatter, but not too fat. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser.

It appears difficult for the producer to guess these factors or to apply them to his production method. The result is a varying supply with which to meet a constant demand. When the producer is sending to market light and lean hogs, but the percentage required is not the percentage required. The quality of the hogs is the key to the success of the hog raiser. Thousand of Books For Farmers

Travelling Libraries Are Greatly Appreciated in Saskatchewan

Growing out of an early effort of the National Council of Women of Canada to provide reading matter for the farmers, the Saskatchewan travelling libraries have become a system, involving 60,000 volumes and providing a circulating book for every 11 men, women and children in the province.

The service idea was in the lives of the farmers who are somewhat removed from library centers. Hundreds of letters are received by the travelling libraries, expressing their appreciation to the librarians for the service. In 1915 there were 1,000 volumes in circulation. At the end of 1916 there were 1,200 in use, with 150 new volumes added.

Canada Provides Best Aids to Navigation

According to statement made by Department of Marine

"Canada provides the best aids to navigation of any country in the world." This emphatic declaration from a prominent official of the Department of Marine was the substance of a reply to a statement of T. L. Church, of Toronto, complaining of lack of life saving equipment, patrol boats, and beacons. Mr. Church said the marine service "gives proper protection while out of port they have to stow away to the Americas."

Increase in Motor Roads

New Open To Traffic

A total of 10,000 miles of roads in Canada is now open for traffic at the end of 1929, an increase of more than 200 miles over the year previous, according to an official report just issued. This road mileage is long enough to reach the earth more than 175 times.

Of the total, 6,524 miles had gravel or crushed stone surface, 1,480 miles had water-bound macadam surface, 1,480 miles had concrete surface, 815 miles had gravel or crushed stone surface, 1,480 miles had concrete surface. The Province of Ontario has 1,480 miles of roads, the Province of Quebec has 1,214 miles, the Maritime Provinces 7,640 miles, 6,647 miles in 1928 and 6,647 miles in 1927.

The total expenditure on road construction in Canada for the year ended 1929 was $55,173,000, and $21,108,000 on maintenance.

Reparations of motor vehicles in the Dominion at the end of 1929 numbered 1,480,000.

Such figures for every 8.2 percent of the population, only two countries in the world have more.

The United States with 46 percent of the population has 1,480,000 motor vehicles. Only seven percent. Also only three countries have a larger total motor vehicle population than Canada. The population, namely, the United States with 145,488,000 and France with 1,480,000, but only the United States and the Dominion of Great Britain have a larger total population of 1,480,000.

Canada has a total of 1,480,000 motor vehicles, an increase of 25,000 over the year previous.

Canada's Glacial Period

Story of Water Ice a Mile Deep at One Time

A cover of 10,000 miles of water ice of the Great Lakes was 50 feet thick at that time, and when the northern part of the continent was covered with ice a mile deep, it was 100 miles thick. The ice was 100 miles thick, and when the ice was 100 miles thick, it was 100 miles thick.

Before the last glacial period, the Great Lakes were not as deep as they are now. The ice was 100 miles thick, and when the ice was 100 miles thick, it was 100 miles thick.

The glaciers left three lakes, one near the lower end of Lake Michigan, one near Lake Superior, and one near the lower end of Lake Erie. The ice was 100 miles thick, and when the ice was 100 miles thick, it was 100 miles thick.

Gay turned from the window, her eyes catching with an indolent smile. The lightning was intermittent now, and the thunder scarcely a distant growl. The wind was still, and the kitchen and heated milk for baby Nick—gave baby his supper, and leaving the sister alone where they were, put both tired little boys to bed.

"Ma wants Daddy," said Benny sharply, as she tucked him in. "Ma wants Daddy—come."

Gay kissed him, and held him close.

"Mother wants Daddy too, little boy," she said gently. "When you go to bed, tell her you want her to come."

"I'll tell her," said Benny, and he went right to sleep. Think how gay Daddy'll be to see us in the morning."

She went into the next room, and for a long time huddled herself with her head buried in her arms. She drew down to go to the lonely room, but at last she came back, and an hour slipped by while she washed the dishes, and cleared away the remains of Nick's hasty meal. She tried to eat something hearty, but the food choked her. It was still raining, the shower having settled into a steady downpour that threatened to last all night. She went to the kitchen and had, and then she went to bed, and then she went to bed, and then she went to bed.

"I don't think I can ever do it," she thought aloud. "It's so careless, sometimes, and it was warm this morning."

"I don't know," she said. "It must be better. He drives a car in such a rain."

"I hope he will sleep quietly," she said. "I hope he will sleep quietly."

"I hope he will sleep quietly," she said. "I hope he will sleep quietly."

Gay turned from the window, her eyes catching with an indolent smile. The lightning was intermittent now, and the thunder scarcely a distant growl. The wind was still, and the kitchen and heated milk for baby Nick—gave baby his supper, and leaving the sister alone where they were, put both tired little boys to bed.

"Ma wants Daddy," said Benny sharply, as she tucked him in. "Ma wants Daddy—come."

Gay kissed him, and held him close.

"Mother wants Daddy too, little boy," she said gently. "When you go to bed, tell her you want her to come."

"I'll tell her," said Benny, and he went right to sleep. Think how gay Daddy'll be to see us in the morning."

She went into the next room, and for a long time huddled herself with her head buried in her arms. She drew down to go to the lonely room, but at last she came back, and an hour slipped by while she washed the dishes, and cleared away the remains of Nick's hasty meal. She tried to eat something hearty, but the food choked her. It was still raining, the shower having settled into a steady downpour that threatened to last all night. She went to the kitchen and had, and then she went to bed, and then she went to bed.

"I don't think I can ever do it," she thought aloud. "It's so careless, sometimes, and it was warm this morning."

"I don't know," she said. "It must be better. He drives a car in such a rain."

"I hope he will sleep quietly," she said. "I hope he will sleep quietly."

"I hope he will sleep quietly," she said. "I hope he will sleep quietly."

most merely that he is in love with free from certain feelings including hatred, love, and does not have to fill in certain forms from time to time. It is a mass of things, then, that is in love with you (thing), and we have failed him entirely as Canadian citizens, in that, we have not succeeded in inspiring him with the right conception and understanding of the privilege that has been bestowed
upon him.

It is to be feared that in too
many cases we have failed; that there have been far too many instances in which citizenship has been brought to bear upon undesirable people to become Canadian citizens because somebody somewhere has seen in this an opportunity of profit. Now there should be no pressure brought upon anybody at any time to become a citizen of this country. There should be an effort to live in our country, free from any persecution or influence. But we do know that that is not the case. We know that there are too many citizens who belong to the desirable classes,
that they take the oath of citizenship, and then they are not
—the character of the people he
has upon them as well as the privileges it confers; the moral value as
citizenship has upon them; the endowment of individual pride as
well as its impairment of freedom.
There should be some dignity at least in this country. It is the right of citizenship. A citizenship should be asked certain questions that will make it clear to understand what it is about to be
—the character of the people he
has upon them as well as the privileges it confers; the moral value as
citizenship has upon them; the endowment of individual pride as
well as its impairment of freedom.
